The contest was a success from the 100 feet frontage.

The contest was a success from the start. Within a short time 225 boys notified the editor that they desired to be entered on the list of contestants in this interesting competition.

The Eveniso World, in pursuance of its well-known policy of helping and encouraging the industrious and deserving, furnished 1,000 circulars to every boy who desired them, with their names and addresses printed thereon, free of charge, so that they could distribute them among the residents of their immediate vicinity and build up their routes.

Last week a postal was sent to each of the boys, notifying them that the contest had closed, and requesting them to send in their lists of names and addresses of their customers, so that the largest lists fiber quistomers, so that the largest lists read to find the premises were occupied by the Eaton Manufacturing Company, which makes a fuel-saying chemical.

He is a pupil of Grammar School No. 51 in West Forty-fourth street.

The second prize of $10 in gold goes to William Clements and delivers nearly all of them in the vicinity of West Forty-ninth street, where he lives.

In conversation with young Clements some interesting facts regarding delivery were gained. He said:

"I would never be able to deliver so many papers so quickly, only my customers live close together within a few blocks. I frequently have as many as six customers in one house, and I proceed upthrough a fist or apartment house, leaving papers to customers on each floor until I woone could tell what caused them. through a flat or apartment house, leaving papers to customers on each floor until I reach the top, when I go out through the roof door, proceed along the roof to the next house, and work down to the street. When my papers are late I hire a little boy to assist me."

During the fire several loud explosions were heard in the burning building, but wo one could tell what caused them. As the foors became weakened the heavy looms of the silk company came crashing through to the lower stories, sending up showers of sparks and blazing cinders.

Snapper Garrison and His Father-in-Law Fall Out.

THEIR PARTNERSHIP ENDED

Legal Proceedings Resorted To in Settling Up Their Affairs.

The chief topic of conversation amon racing men this morning was the dissolution of partnership between Snapper Garrison and his father in-law, William McMahon.

During the past year the two have been associated as joint owners of a racing stable, under the firm name of McMahon

Occasionally throughout the season rumors and stories floated about the track that all was not peace and harmony between the jockey and his wife's father. Little credit was given the rumors, and they were set down in sporting circles as idle gossip.

The news of a serious disagreement be tween these two noted figures of the turf comes like a thunder-clap from a clear coroningly objected to by Garnson, on principle.

At one time, on a recent racing day, the two men nearly came to blows on the Guitenburg track. They were prevented from assaulting one another only by the interference of friends.

The two most prominent horses belonging to the firm are Eolan and Cyclops.

Recently the two members of the firm met at the office of Howe & Hummel and arranged to dissolve the partnership existing between them.

Garrison had already taken steps to restrain his father-in-law from signing checks or acting in any other way as a partner.

Garrison's expected tour to England, for, in spite of his earnest denials that he had any intention of sailing for the other side of the Atlantic, it is known that he intends to sail for Liverpool this month.

It is highly probable that "Pittsburg Phil," alias George Smith, the celebrated plunging better, will accompany Garrison on his foreign tour.

The famous American jockey will accept several English mounts, but will under no circumstances permanently desert America for England, as he can make three times as much money in the United

Later in the day, Garrison went to the stables of the firm, with the injunction in his pocket, and with the assistance of the grooms, quietly took possession of the horses, which he claimed as his individual property. McMahon had previously made an assignment of his share in the firm to his wife, and Monday Garrison's mother-in-law served him with an injunction restraining him from taking away his share of the horses. Garrison's counter-injunction and subsequent seizure of his share of the firm's property was an unpleasant surprise to the McMahons. This trouble with his partner will delay Garrison's expected tour to England, for, in spite of his earnest denials that he had
